90,000 Jews Placed Under House Arrest In Palestine Today

Kidnapings of British Banker, Judge Lead to Drastic Order

Jerusalem, Jan. 27.—(AP)—Two kidnapings of Britons resulted in the placing of 90,000 Palestine Jews under house arrest today, and British military forces postponed the hanging scheduled tomorrow of an alleged Jewish underground terrorist.

Police officials said the kidnapings of a British banker and a British judge apparently were efforts by the Irgun Zvai Leumi, underground organization, to head off the execution of an alleged Irgun member convicted of participating in an attack on a police station.

Lt. Gen. Sir Evelyn Barker ordered an indefinite delay in the hanging of the man, Dov Bela Groner, 35. The delay was granted when a Palestine attorney acting on behalf of Groner's sister in Lancaster, Pa., Mrs. Helen Friedman, took steps to appeal the case to the privy council, Britain's Supreme court.

The military clamped a strict house-to-house curfew on 90,000 persons in Jewish sections of Jerusalem and Tel Aviv a few hours after 10 persons—described by police as armed Jews—abducted Judge Ralph Windham from the Tel Aviv District court.

REJECTS PARTITION

London, Jan. 27.—(AP)—Dr. Jamal Effendi Hussein, vice chairman of the Palestine Arab higher executive, rejected partition today as a solution of the Palestine problem and warned that creation of a Jewish state there would be a "permanent source of trouble in the Middle East."

A fresh outbreak of anti-British violence in Palestine by the Jews.

Spies Hearing Is Slated Tomorrow

Anthony Spiess, 41, facing six indictments charging burglary, will appear in Lee county Circuit court tomorrow morning before Judge George C. Dixon for a hearing in aggravation and mitigation on the first of the indictments, charging burglary of the apartment of Mrs. Floyd Eno at the Manor apartments, 122 East Fellows street, Nov. 1.

Spiess appeared in court Thursday to change his plea on the charge from one of not guilty to guilty.

No definite date has been revealed, meanwhile, for arguments on motions to quash two of the indictments against Spiess, filed last week, which charge that the indictments list fictitious addresses for the apartments of Mrs. H. M. Rasch and A. H. Lancaster.

The motions charge that there is no address such as that listed in the indictments, 212 South Ottawa avenue.

Spiess was bound over to the grand jury Nov. 6 on charges that he burglarized the apartments of Mrs. Eno, John Duffy, Mrs. Ted Legner and Miss Margaret Nash at the Manor apartments, and those of Mrs. Rasch and Lancaster at the Rasch apartments, 212 Ottawa avenue.

Bond on each of the charges was set at $2,000.

World Flight by Army Planes Key Marshall Problem

Washington, Jan. 27.—(AP)—Secretary of State Marshall apparently will have to decide shortly before or after his trip to Moscow whether to let the Army Air Forces send a fleet of B-29 bombers around the world.

The same problem came before James F. Byrnes last fall when he was secretary of state and Byrnes in effect blocked the venture at a delicate period of United States-Russian relations.

What actually happened was that after Assistant Secretary of War Symington suddenly announced that the air forces were planning the world circling flight, the state department's unofficial opposition became so apparent the military chiefs suspended immediate plans for the operation.

But that was last fall with the Paris peace conference still ahead and with Moscow still voicing sharp disapproval of the American navy's Mediterranean cruises.

Since then the situation has changed considerably. Recently there have been persistent reports that the air forces are going ahead actively again with arrangements for the flight. Army airmen say simply that plans have never been cancelled and hence do not need to be revived.

May Delay Request
At what point the state department may be called upon for approval is not yet indicated, but most informants believe it probably will be either late this winter or early in the spring.

The probability is that the request will be delayed until after the foreign ministers' meeting at Moscow to avoid any question of disturbing international diplomacy at a time when the United States is preparing for a major conference.

David E. Blankenship, 22, sheriff of Bond county, and his office deputy, Dolores I. McKie, 21, took time out from an official business trip here to be married at the court house by Judge Grover W. Gehant.

The Greenville, Ill., couple came here to deliver a patient to the state hospital, took out a license in the office of County Clerk Sterling Schrock and received medical examinations Friday, then were married Saturday morning.

County Superintendent of Schools John Torrens was a witness.

Ex-Mobster Capone Left No Will and No Money His Attorney Says

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 27.—(AP)—The body of Al Capone, once fabulously wealthy Chicago gang leader whose attorney said he died broke, lay in a mortuary here today, waiting completion of plans for the funeral here later this week.

Dr. Kenneth Phillips, who attended Capone for several years and was with the 48-year-old ex-mobster when he died in his 25-room villa on nearby Palm Island Saturday, said the final rites would be held here. Other information, he added, must come from the family.

In Los Angeles, Capone's attorney, Abraham Teitelbaum, said as far as he knew "Al left no will and no money." The lawyer said members of Capone's family had supported him in recent years, and

Prospects Seem Bright for Inter-American Defense Conference

Washington, Jan. 27.—(AP)—Prospects for holding the long postponed inter-American defense conference at Rio de Janeiro appear brighter today than at any time during the past 15 months.

The reason for this is evidence that the United States and Argentina are nearing a settlement of their differences over Nazi influences in the South American republic.

The conference originally was scheduled for October, 1945, to negotiate a mutual defense treaty within the framework of the United Nations charter.

The United States, however, balked at the idea of signing any such compact with Argentina until that country had eliminated German ownership from business firms, deported known Nazi agents and removed German influence from schools and other institutions.

Repeated contentions that Argentina had not fulfilled these demands finally led to indefinite postponement of the conference.

But this impasse began to crack over the week end in a rapid series of events.

Princeton Opens War On Lottery Rackets

Princeton, Ill., Jan. 25.—(AP)—Joseph R. Peterson, Bureau county state's attorney, said he has "declared war on the syndicate lottery racket" which he says is a $5,000,000 business operating in the county.

Peterson told a special meeting of 16 Bureau county mayors and village presidents last night "If I get your cooperation we'll get rid of them."

The meeting was called by the state's attorney and Sheriff Henry Keutzer.

Peterson said the lottery dealt in punch boards and lucky boards. No members of the alleged syndicate were named.

The villa was "mortgaged to the hilt."

Federal officials once estimated Capone's fortune at $20,000,000 but, Teitelbaum said, "Al still owed the government money when he died."

Georgia Assembly Returns to Work; Deadlock Unabated

State Facing Possible Strangulation Due to Lack of Funds

Atlanta, Jan. 27.—(AP)—Georgia faced today a threat of slow strangulation of governmental functions through lack of funds unless its two rival governors go to court promptly with their dispute.

Meanwhile, the general assembly returned to work with a "white primary" bill as the first order of business in the house of representatives where Speaker Fred Hand was expected to ask a probe of allegations that bribes were offered to influence assembly votes on the night Herman Talmadge was elected governor by the legislature.

Showdown on the state's financial operations came Sunday when State Treasurer George B. Hamilton flatly informed both gubernatorial claimants he was putting off disbursements to any appointive department head until he was "protected by a Supreme Court decision."

He asked them both, Talmadge and his rival, Lt. Gov. M. E. Thompson who claims executive authority as "acting governor," to bring a consent mandamus suit against him to settle the issue in court.

After unannounced conferences with Talmadge and Thompson, Hamilton said he had informed them that he refused to recognize the appointments of either, whether Senate-confirmed (as Talmadge's have been) or not.

Turns Down Tax Collections
Moreover, he said, he would accept no tax collections from Talmadge's revenue commission.

Portal Pay Suits Threaten Industry Recession—Wiley

Washington, Jan. 27.—(AP)—Chairman Wiley (R-Wis) of the senate judiciary committee said today "recession threatens America" and portal-to-portal suits make it "more and more possible."

Urging legislation to outlaw the nationwide wave of back pay claims, Wiley declared: "Time is working against us, we must act now on this legislation to curb this spreading fear that is paralyzing all industry."

Testifying as a judiciary subcommittee neared the end of 10 days of hearings on the issue, Wiley said in a statement that "The very success or failure of the nation's reconversion program depends on the answer we give to this problem."

The senator counseled "speed and adequacy," asserting that the public interest is menaced. He noted that industry witnesses had described adverse effects of the suits on business, and that the federal government itself faces a financial dire straits.

Enemies Grab Advantage
"State and local governments also," Wiley said, cannot lightly dismiss "the matter of tax adjustments, prospective and retrospective" if the suits are successful.

"Enemies of America at home and abroad are making the most of this chaotic uncertainty," the senator continued. "They are trying to bedevil the issue and in so doing, to set class against class here."

Wiley outlined again details of his own bill intended to offset the Supreme court's decision which opened the way to the flood of suits now totalling more than four and three quarters millions.

"Rack and Ruin"
His measure would remove any past or future suit for portal pay from court jurisdiction and would provide a definition for "productive work" under the wage-hour act.

"To American free enterprise," Wiley asserted, "portal-to-portal means to rack and ruin."

The senator did not amplify his reference to a recession in his prepared statement, it said:

"Gentlemen, there is no blinking at the fact: A recession threatens America. These portal-to-portal suits make that recession more and more possible. Time is working against us; we must act now on this legislation to curb this spreading fear that is paralyzing all industry."

'Favorite Sons' in Senate Rapped by Angry Teammate

Washington, Jan. 27.—(AP)—Senator Tobey (R-NH) called today for "fewer favorite sons" in the Republican organization.

At the same time, however, he denied that he is kicking over party traces with any intent to upset GOP control of the senate.

The gray haired New Hampshire senator—vocal defender of an unsuccessful Democratic battle last week to halt continuation of the war investigating and small business committees—told a reporter he is going along with the Republicans when he thinks they are right—but not at other times.

Tobey was one of four Republicans who voted against the two committees.

"I've been a Republican for nearly 45 years," he said. "I'm no bolter. But I'm jealous of my party. I want it to be as clean as a whistle. I want it to deserve the commendations of the country for its forthrightness."

Repeats Floor Charges

In this connection Tobey said he thinks there are "too many favorite sons" in the present GOP senate organization.

He repeated charges he made on the floor last week that the two special committees had been set up primarily to give chairmanships to Senators Brewster (R-Me), on the war investigating group and Wherry (R-Neb), on the small business committee. Both of the latter denied this.

Siding with the Democrats who claimed the Republicans were chiseling away the congressional reorganization act by setting up special committees, Tobey told his colleagues during debate that GOP leaders had been "running the train off the tracks" and were demanding that party members become "yes men."

He named Senators Taft (R-Ohio), Vandenberg (R-Mich.) and White (R-Me), as the leaders involved.

No Revenge Indicated
None of these gave any indication they expect to strike back.

Manila, Jan. 27.—(AP)—President Manuel Roxas, in a state of the nation address before a joint session of the first Philippine congress, declared today "we must preserve at all costs our intimate relationship" with the United States.

He disclosed that the United States recently expressed willingness to withdraw all military forces from the Philippines.

He said "present plans, however, provide a much less ambitious schedule of bases than originally contemplated."

Today's Acts, Talks in Nation's Capital Summarized by A. P.

Activities on Capitol Hill Briefed by Writers for Telegraph Readers

Washington, Jan. 27.—(AP)—Rep. Knutson (R-Minn.), leader of the move in congress to cut individual income taxes, said today it can't be done if portal pay suits stand up.

He introduced legislation to outlaw the suits.

Chairman of the tax-writing house and ways and means committee, Knutson told his colleagues that treasury estimates indicate the government may have to pay as much as $4,000,000,000 if the suits are successful. He added:

"Such an enormous loss in the revenue would, of course, put an end to any hope for individual tax relief this year."

TODAY'S ACTS

Knutson is sponsoring a bill to cut individual income taxes 20 per cent.

A senate judiciary subcommittee has been holding hearings for 10 days on bills introduced there to void the portal claims.

Other Developments

In other congressional developments: The legislators received a request from President Truman for appropriation of $300,000,000 for costs of government and relief in the occupied areas of Germany, Austria and Japan.

This amount would be in addition to $425,000,000 previously appropriated for the 12 months ending next July 1.

Rep. Landis (R-Ind) introduced a resolution which would have congress declare that the United States favors banning compulsory military service throughout the world by international agreement.

David E. Lillenthal, nominated by Truman to be chairman of Atomic Energy Commission, gave the senate atomic committee his ideas of the big problems facing the commission. He said the commission would be "foolhardy" if it disregarded national defense as its prime objective "in the present state of international affairs."

Oregon Boy, Aged 9, Struck by Car

John Ennenga, Jr., 9, Oregon, was reported slightly improved today after being struck and run over by a taxi shortly after 3 p. m. Saturday as he was crossing route 64 at the east edge of Oregon.

The boy who was taken to War-mo's clinic there after the accident, was reported to be suffering from internal injuries about the head and abdomen, but his father John Ennenga, Sr., said at noon today that there was no indication of concussion and no fractures. He said he thought the boy would recover.

The youth was struck by the taxi about 500 feet east of the Rock river bridge on route 64 as he crossed the road after leaving his father's car. Both front and rear wheels of the taxi, driven by Charles Kinn, 50, Oregon, passed over the boy's body.

Kinn, driving west, was reported unable to stop before hitting the boy as he darted across the pavement.

Permanent registration doesn't apply to city, township and school elections. However qualifications for these are the same as in county elections. Voters must have lived in the state a year, 90 days in the county and 30 days in the city or precinct.

Schrock said that a large number of people registering at his office now were under the impression that permanent registration was necessary for a city or school election.

Fate of Jap War-Criminals May Rest With Supreme Court of U. S.

Tokyo, Jan. 27.—(AP)—A final decision on the fate of former Premier Hideki Tojo and 26 other Japanese war crimes defendants may rest with the United States Supreme Court, defense Attorney David F. Smith said today in seeking dismissal of the indictment.

Smith, explained to newsmen that his procedure would be to file suit in federal court in Washington to restrain the secretary of war, under whose authority General MacArthur is acting, from carrying out any sentence of the international tribunal which is approved by MacArthur as reviewing officer.

The case then would be taken to the Supreme court for argument on the authority of MacArthur and of the tribunal.

At the direction of Sir William Webb, tribunal president, the defense began arguments on individual motions in behalf of each defendant a process expected to require about three days.

The defense in its move for dismissal contended that a conspiracy among the defendants to violate international law and treaties had not been proved, that the Pearl Harbor attack was not pertinent to the trial because the United States had received "adequate warning" through intercepted Japanese messages, and that hearsay evidence and affidavits had been admitted, thus prejudicing the rights of the defendants to a fair trial.

Candidate

Col. John E. Earle, a candidate for commissioner in the coming primary, came to Dixon in 1905 to enter the employ of the Reynolds Wire Co. In 1908 he became a salesman for one of the large silk manufacturers and traveled extensively for them throughout the United States until the outbreak of the first World War.

He was commissioned 2nd Lieutenant of Infantry at the Officers Training Camp, Fort Sheridan in 1917, served two years overseas, being promoted to the rank of captain, was decorated with the Silver Palms of the Academic Francaise by the French government, and returned to Dixon after the war.

In 1941 Col. Earle, who had been on duty with the 2nd Corps Area as senior instructor of quarter-master reserves for some time, was ordered to Iceland. Upon his return to the United States in 1942, he was assigned to the Charleston Port of Embarkation where he remained until he was retired for physical disability incurred in the line of duty late in 1944 after over 26 years of active and reserve duty.

While on duty at Charleston he was fire marshal and chief of special services, and organized the special service division of the port and because of his record was employed immediately upon his retirement, as director of safety in charge of police, fire department and industrial safety, by National Fireworks, Inc., operators of the Naval Ordnance Plant, Camden, Ark. When this company's contract was terminated in 1945, he

Open Chicago Hunt for Gary Strangler

Gary, Ind., Jan. 27.—(AP)—Detectives from this city planned to go to Chicago today in a hunt for the strangler of attractive Mrs. Irene Shawskey whose bound body was found Sunday in a swamp on the western outskirts of Gary.

Coroner Robert J. Doty said the body of the 30-year-old woman had been identified by her father, John Wiebrecht, and her husband, Frank Shawskey, both of Chicago.

The coroner said the woman had been strangled with a piece of twine and that her ankles also had been bound with twine.

Mrs. Shawskey's husband, a war veteran, told police that since his discharge from the service he and his wife had been unable to find housing accommodations and she had been living with her parents and he had made his home with his stepfather and his mother, Mr. and Mrs. William E. Larson.

Missing Since Thursday

Police said Wiebrecht told them his daughter had been missing since Thursday from his home where she had been living with her 5-year-old daughter, Nancy.

Mrs. Shawskey's body was fully clad, except for shoes. Officers described the clothing as expensive. The coroner said an examination indicated Mrs. Shawskey had not been raped.

A wedding ring and a wrist watch, both studded with diamonds, were found on her body.

Anthony Standarski, a Hammond truck driver who had gone to the swamp to dig ferns, found the body.

Officers said Mrs. Shawskey apparently was last seen alive Saturday by Mrs. Mary Colantonio, 28, of Chicago, with whom Mrs. Shawskey worked in a Chicago retail store.

Mrs. Colantonio's address was found on a note in the pocket of the slain woman's suit. Mrs. Colantonio said Mrs. Shawskey had planned to visit her and that she had given the address to help Mrs. Shawskey reach her home.

Shawskey told officers he had called on his wife Saturday after leaving the post office where he is employed as a truck driver. He said that when he did not find her home he spent the evening with friends.

Shawskey gave officers an account of his movements Saturday and Sunday. He then returned to Chicago.

Labor and Industry Are United Against Compulsory Order

Neither Wants Problems Settled Finally by Government

Washington, Jan. 27—(AP)—Is there any way to stop strikes? Is there any law congress can pass to stop them?

If there is, no one has come up with it. Yet, you'll hear people say: A compulsory arbitration law could stop them.

It isn't that simple. Congress won't pass such a law, at least not now. Compulsory arbitration means simply: "I'll decide for you."

Neither employers nor unions want the government, through law to be able to decide their problems for them.

Compulsory arbitration would go like this:

A union and an employer can't agree. The union threatens to strike. The employer threatens to close down his plant.

The government steps in and says: "There can be no strike and no shutdown. This case must be submitted to arbitration."

The government would set up one man, or a group of men, as arbitrator.

Board's Decision Final

Or the government would order an arbitrator board set up this way: One man representing the union, another the boss, and a third the public.

After hearing the arguments on both sides, the board would give a decision which would be final. Union and employer would have to accept it.

For example: The union may want a raise of $1 an hour. The boss says he'll give no raise at all. The board decides the union should get a raise of 75 cents or $1 an hour. The boss must give the raise.

Or—the board decides the boss is right and the union can't get a raise. Then the union must continue working without a raise.

Unions and employers both strongly oppose compulsory arbitration. The National Association of Manufacturers has come out flatly against it.

Would Erase Freedom

There's no serious talk in congress of such a step. But why are unions and employers against it?

It would take away their freedom to strike or shut down a plant, freedom to settle problems as they see fit. In short: Freedom to slug it out.

If a union is strong enough, it knows that by a strike or threat of a strike, it may get more from a boss than an arbitrator would allow.

And if a boss thinks he can stand the strain, he may prefer to sit back with his plant closed and let the union wear itself out striking.

Through compulsory arbitration the government would be able to say pretty well what wages should be.

If so, the next step would be to say what prices should be. In time, if it set wages, it would have to set prices.

If that time came, we'd no longer have what is now called a "free economy." Government would control labor and business.

Wouldn't Guarantee Success

Compulsory arbitration would not be a guarantee against strikes. While this country pretended to be free, no law could compel men to work.

Further, the Supreme court probably would decide compulsory arbitration was unconstitutional. The reason:

It would compel workers and employers to accept working conditions against their will.

Some unions and employers have voluntary arbitration agreements. But that's different from a law compelling arbitration.

The voluntary agreements work like this:

The union and employer, when they sign a contract, agree to let an arbitrator of their own choosing settle any dispute they can't settle themselves.

But there is a lot of talk in congress about setting up mediation for unions and employers as a means of cutting down the number of strikes.

Mediation is different from arbitration.

Under a mediation law—before there could be a strike or shutdown—union and employer would have to let a government official try to help them settle their problem.

But if the mediator failed, the union could strike or the employer could shut down his plant.

But mediation still is only in the talking stage in congress.

Congress Studying Unique Plan Calling For World Calendar

Plan Covers Span From 4236 B. C. to Unknown Limits of Future

Washington—Jan. 27.—Congress was today faced with proposed legislation quite different from any ever before it, prior to the last session. Historically it went back to the year 4236 B. C., and looked forward to unborn generations of the future. Probably this bill for adoption of the world calendar covered the longest span of any bill ever before the Congress of the United States. It also envisaged the rearrangement of our present obsolete calendar, and thus simultaneously dealt with an extraordinarily complex subject, an infinite variety of "consumers" and the most abstract and abstruse problems.

The proposed legislation for a new time-table to govern the lives of peoples and individuals throughout the nation, was proposed under bipartisan auspices. Many government agencies interested in the mechanics and techniques of time standards joined with the legislative officials in proposing that this manner of standardizing time should be adopted by the United States as soon as possible.

Urges Close Study
Companion legislation was introduced into the Senate in the closing days of the last session by the Honorable H. Alexander Smith, Republican of New Jersey, and the Honorable James E. Murray, Democrat of Montana, who urged their colleagues to study the subject carefully during the recess, and who are said now to be planning again to reintroduce similar legislation.

The effect of these bills has been to stir widespread interest in the subject. Business men have recognized that it would be desirable to fix holidays so that they remain on a day and date certain. Statisticians cheer for the reform because it will mean that comparable periods of time may be surveyed without variations of complex adjustments. Communications and transportation companies will be relieved of the burden of constantly preparing new time-tables and schedules and endless revision to bring them in accord with the vagaries of the present calendar. Educators will be free to avoid the mechanistic routine involved in the preparation of academic curricula each year to make them conform to the ever-changing calendar now in use.

Gets Powerful Support
Powerful interests in the fields of commerce, industry, labor, education and science have been articulate in expressing their support of this legislation. Fourteen nations have approved it. These include Afghanistan, Brazil, Chile, China, Estonia, Greece, Hungary, Mexico, Norway, Panama, Peru, Spain, Turkey and Uruguay.

"Briefly summarizing the major benefits that will be achieved by adoption of The World Calendar," said Mr. John Kee, "let me state them as follows:

1. It will fix the year in perpetuity in accordance with the scientific length of the year and retain the twelve months made familiar by the Gregorian Calendar.
2. It will retain and equalize the half-years and make them comparable.
3. It will reapportion the number of days in the months more equally.
4. It will retain and equalize the quarters of the year.
5. It will provide a uniform grouping of the months in a pattern and sequence of days in each quarter of the year.
6. It will provide thirteen complete weeks within each quarter and group these weeks uniformly.
7. It will establish an equal working month of 26 business days plus Sundays for all the months, and will reduce the inequality the months from a maximum of 3 days to 1 day.

8. It will fix holidays so they will always fall on the same day and date.

9. It will enable each year, half-year, and quarter to begin on Sunday, which is retained as the first day of the week, and to end on Saturday, which is retained as the last day of the week.

10. It will for the first time in history give man a Year End World Holiday set apart from all other days and appropriately dedicated to world peace and friendship, and also a midyear World Holiday every four years, in leap years."

Clay Labels Report on Europe as Premature

Berlin, Jan. 27.—(AP)—A statement by the international committee for the study of European questions to the effect that few Germans were responding to democracy was labelled a "prematurely drawn conclusion" yesterday by Lt. Gen. Lucius D. Clay, deputy U. S. military governor. Clay said the process of conversion "would take a great many years."

"We never claimed it could be done quickly," said Clay. "All that one can fairly do now is to assess our success in approximately two years and therefrom attempt to gauge our chance of success over the long pull."

Empire State Suicide Hits, Injures Woman

New York, Jan. 27.—(AP)—David H. Gordon, Jr., 28, leaped to his death yesterday from the 86th floor of the Empire State building and his hurtling body struck and injured seriously a woman passerby on the sidewalk below.

The pedestrian, Mrs. Mervin S. Coover, 51, of Ames, Iowa, wife of the head of the electrical engineering department at Iowa State college, remained in a critical condition today. Attendants said she suffered neck and arm injuries and abrasions.

Police said Gordon made the 1,000-foot leap from the world's tallest building after telling Chief Petty Officer James Lambert, another visitor on the observation floor, "I'm going to jump." Lambert, unable to dissuade Gordon, called to the two guards who rushed toward Gordon, but missed by inches being able to grab him.

Max Furman, assistant state attorney general, identified Gordon as his nephew and said he had been "depressed" since his release from the army on a medical discharge a year ago.

Ex-School Teacher in Jail; Malicious Mischief

Galesburg, Ill., Jan. 27.—(AP)—Despite her plea that she had "livestock" to feed, a 50-year-old former school teacher has been sent to jail on a malicious mischief charge as a result of her campaign to retain possession of her father's home.

Miss Alda Henry of Abingdon was locked up Saturday in default of $1,000 bond after deputy sheriffs charged she refused to turn over the home to its new owners and that they interrupted her attempting to cut off the front porch with a saw and hammer.

The Abingdon home was sold recently by the public administrator to pay off debts of the estate of her late father, George W. Henry.

After demanding a jury trial and saying she would defend herself, Miss Henry told County Judge Gale A. Mathers he should not send her to jail because she had "livestock" to feed.

Sheriff Charles Dahler reported that her livestock consisted of one rooster, two hens and two cats and the court ordered her bond set.

Youth Week Offers Special Programs

The week beginning with last Sunday of January has been annually designated as Youth Week by the International Council of Religious Education. This Council represents 41 denominations and 173 state, city and provincial councils. In each church and by the interdenominational committee of youth, special programs have been arranged.

In this connection, opportunities for winning college scholarships are offered. It is too late for local youth to enter contests for this year's awards, but preparation for the 1948 award may be begun now.

The council offers each year two college scholarships valued at $1,600 (one for a boy and one for a girl) as national awards; also six regional awards of $1,000 each. Participants must be Christian young people between the ages of 16 and 24, who are seniors in high school, freshmen in college, or employed young people who are high school graduates. There are also 24 scholarships to Regional Conferences of the United Christian Youth movement on the basis of outstanding Christian character and service.

Young people interested should consult their pastor, or the chairman of the weekday Christian Education committee of the local Council, Vernon G. Mays.

Dentists Urged to Watch Symptoms of Nervous Ailments

Can Aid Effective Care by Detection of Many Disorders Early

San Francisco, Jan. 27.—(AP)—The hangfire laugh, in which one side of the face lags behind the other in assuming a mirthful expression, is evidence of a strange, little-known disease.

A quivering tongue is the sign of another nervous disorder involving difficulties in speaking, chewing and swallowing.

Tired, droopy eyelids which become fogged out and unable to move after a few rapid blinks are symptoms of another ailment which can be serious and even can result in sudden death after exertion.

These are among a list of 21 nervous diseases described by Dr. Robert Wartenberg, University of California medical school neurologist, in an attempt to familiarize dentists with the symptoms so that they might advise patients with such afflictions to consult nerve specialists. The list was published in the American Journal of Orthodontics and Oral surgery.

Dentists Can Help

Detection of these disorders via the dental chair can be of help to both the patient and the dentist, Dr. Wartenberg reported, because effective treatment often depends upon early recognition, and because a nerve disease may influence the whole picture of tooth repair.

Dentists are in a good position to recognize the ailments, since the symptoms appear in the face, and people in general see their dentist oftener than their doctor. The delayed laugh is a symptom of one form of facial palsy. If the injury involved is in a certain part of the brain, the face muscles may move normally during conscious effort, but when the person laughs the affected side of the face lags behind the normal side in registering mirth.

Droopy, fatigued eyelids are listed as an indication of myasthenia, a serious disease affecting the connection between nerves and muscles. Dr. Wartenberg said that because of the danger of sudden death the dentist should consult a physician about a patient before undertaking emergency mouth operations.

Bulbar Paralysis Sign

The quivering tongue is a sign of progressive bulbar paralysis, which is due to the degeneration of nerves and muscles controlling head and face functions, and for which, Dr. Wartenberg reported, there is no known cure.

Another disease described was pathologic laughing and crying, in which brain injuries prevent voluntary control of emotional reactions. The victim laughs or cries without any recognizable cause; he may laugh at bad news and cry over good tidings.

Two kinds of neuralgia were described. In one of these, pain in the side of the face or the jaws may be symptomatic of a brain tumor or other brain injury; in the other, talking, chewing or even washing the face may cause a paroxysm of pain and sometimes the cramping of facial muscles.

The report also described a rare and striking disease known as progressive lipodystrophy, in which the face and upper part of the body become devoid of fat. The patient looks emaciated from head to waist but enormous masses of fat accumulate below the belt line. The disease is attributed to a disturbance in the part of the brain which regulates fat distribution.

Women socially active should supply themselves with correct stationery, note heads, formal and engraved visiting cards.

Bonus Payments to Come Soon: Green

Chicago, Jan. 27.—(AP)—The military bonus payments to Illinois service men will be handled with "all possible speed," Gov. Dwight H. Green said yesterday in a radio address.

The service recognition board, the governor announced, plans to open offices both in Chicago and Springfield to receive and process the more than 900,000 bonus applications expected.

Gov. Green, head of the board, said it will "proceed with all possible speed to establish headquarters, engage and train necessary personnel, and otherwise execute the law expeditiously."

Funds from the $385,000,000 bond issue which voters approved last November for the bonus payments would not become available before July 1 under a regular legislative appropriation, but recently there has been some indication that the measure would take the form of an emergency act in the legislature.

The governor also listed in his radio talk what he called the five "most pressing obligations before the state government". They are: Education and rehabilitation of veterans; elimination of "dangerously overcrowded condition" in state welfare institutions; encouragement of housing construction "through state cooperation with private capital"; "increased financial needs of the public schools"; and further development of public health services, "particularly the construction of new hospitals in those areas of the state where there are no such facilities at the present time."

Substantial business men need good looking engraved business cards. See our samples. E. F. Shaw Printing Co., printers and engravers for over 96 years in Dixon.

Domestic Symphony

President Truman's relations with Congress during his first few months in the White House have been described as a "honeymoon" period. And if the description was apt at the time, it seems even more so in retrospect.

It was the honeymoon of a wartime marriage, taken in the face of danger and uncertainty. The new President and Congress were old acquaintances, to be sure, but they had not foreseen that their friendship would develop into this new relationship. So there was some feeling of awkwardness and embarrassment, and with it a desperate desire by both to like each other and get along well.

But the honeymoon ended, as was to be expected. Spats were frequent. Each party to the union was headstrong and inclined to be bossy. Each felt that the other was listening too much to outsiders, with the result that waning affections were alienated further.

Things got worse a year ago, when the President tried to lay down the law to Congress about how the national household should be run. Congress wouldn't budge. More wrangling followed.

Meanwhile the household got in rather a bad shape. Other members of the family began quarreling. The squabbles found their way to the heads of the household. They promptly took sides, which disturbed the domestic tranquility even more. Nothing was going well. Ordinary tasks were neglected.

Then there appeared on the scene a neighbor from over the river in Alexandria. A big coal man, he was. He tried to tell both heads of the household how things should be run and, in doing so, disrupted things so badly that the President and Congress became alarmed and forgot their own quarreling for the moment.

The other members of the household had grown impatient and, in November, gave some orders of their own. This outspoken attitude served to quiet the family dissension even more. And with the return of relative peace, the President and Congress looked about them and perceived just what a state of disruption the house had got into. They decided it was time to put things in order.

So, on Jan. 6, the President and Congress got together. There was nothing of the honeymoon in this gesture. Rather, it was like a reconciliation of two people who have lived together, learned each other's strengths and weaknesses, and decided to get along for the sake of the family.

It is natural that the heads of a household should have positive ideas about how the family should be run. But there comes a time when domestic crises force upon them a realization of family responsibilities. They discover that positive ideas must be compromised

News Behind the News

By PAUL MALLON

(Copyright, 1947, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Washington—Unions and management agreed a few days back the trend of this nation is toward socialism—a rather startling agreement—although no notice was paid it. Perhaps one reason this cheerless foreboding drew bare public mention was that AFL's Bill Green did not send around a copy of his speech to the publicists as usually he does. What he said was: Toryism is driving unions to the left; the threatened union reform legislation is being pressed as a strategy of the Tories to destroy the unions. Pointing to the rise of the union socialist government of England, Green asked: "Do you doubt that the same thing could happen here? Is it inconceivable that union workers might be driven to the same course under similar provocation?"

This sparingly reported speech was made to the conference of mayors at which President Wilson of General Motors said, in a political-economic analysis, which should be read by all students of the subject in full: "The attack on profits is really an attempt to substitute state socialism or communism for our free competitive and capitalistic system." He claimed union leftists were forcing us toward a system imported from East of the Rhine, or even from England, installing the state as god and government.

Here was considerable agreement as too the facts. They both say the unions are forcing us to the political and economic bankruptcy of the backward nations. Green excuses this by blaming it on what he calls Toryism (a word imported from England). Furthermore, both seem agreed neither wants to go where we are being pushed.

Behind this, of course, is Green's desire to threaten management with socialism so it will ease down in current dominant demands for union reform. Similarly management wants to threaten socialism to scare labor into a cooperative peace for production. But if they are talking in this way for propaganda purposes, both are also telling the truth.

What neither Green nor Wilson reported was that socialism has decayed and been corrupted by communism throughout the world in the past few months. The trend of socialism, I would say, is toward communism, or a more accurate way to put it is that the communists are using the socialists for their own revolutionary ad-if there is to be a healthy, normal family existence.

It would seem from Mr. Truman's State of the Union message that he and Congress have reached a realization of their family responsibilities. Perhaps it won't endure. Still, it's natural to feel a little more confidence in the mature guidance of those who have weathered a few domestic crises than in a more apparent but untested affection.

vantage. This was not true earlier in the post-war era. The socialists knew and hated the communists better than we democrats. Since then the socialists have become mere dupes for the communists in France, delivering the national defense ministry of that nation to the communists in political exchange for the pretentiouship—to which the socialists had no right whatsoever because they were the single defeated party which lost ground and was assigned to a small minority by the people in the last election.

In Britain, union socialism has taken the bankruptcy of that nation into a union receivership, which cannot even produce enough goods to sustain itself. Everyone knows about the coal shortage situation, but few realize the same condition applies to other British goods and services. Coal is the biggest natural product of Britain, used for export to acquire import food. Lately Britain has not been able to produce enough coal to keep itself warm and going in winter, but the government had to appeal to the miners to produce more and has only partly succeeded.

Union Socialism in Britain has paid the people's money for industries, piling more debt atop the war debt, and as it naturally must grant concessions to the unions in wages, hours and working conditions, it cannot operate to produce enough. This is natural because a union miner, given added pay, shorter hours and less work, can hardly be expected to break his back in an idealistic endeavor to keep the nation warm. Furthermore, in the midst of the Union Socialist party there has arisen a secret bloc favorable to the Moscow foreign policy, or at least anti-American. Anyone with half an eye can see where England is going down, down, down. Churchill once said socialism would have to become a dictatorship like Moscow to force the union men to work, a campaign remark for which he received the counterpart of a tomato in the face. Mr. Wilson now says the same thing from his objective perch. As a matter of fact, anyone can see it.

Now Green seems to realize how bad socialism would be for American labor. The standard of living of the British union people is very low as compared with this country—and it is even lower in France. Socialism would force our wage level down to the declining receipts which socialism provides. Business, you know, is not the stationary thing which socialism pretends. You can seize and maintain the profits of any concern only in story books. The profits are due to the energy of both labor and management, and socialism does not generate energy in either, because it does not carry a reward for effort—a profit to worker or manager for energy expended. Socialism instead tends to break down the volume of production, as can be seen in England, and so there is less for the wage earner and manager to divide between themselves.

These things Green must realize. But he has not yet come to the further inevitable realization that the way to beat socialism is to make capitalism work, to produce more in this goods-scarce era, to cut taxes, yes, to promote even profits so the wage earner can get more—a course opposite the one he has been following.

When he comes to that development from his current thinking, you will see a brighter picture in this country all around.

In the crash the driver of the car, Everett W. Bump, 32, of Rock Island was instantly killed and the third passenger, Joseph C. Gibson, 27, Rock Island, was critically injured.

Miss Wright was born in Dixon and graduated from Dixon high school with the class of 1943. In the fall of that year she entered an electronics school at Omaha, Neb., later serving as a teletype operator in the war information department in New York. She enlisted in the Waves organization, June 14, 1945 and was assigned to duty at Seattle, Wash., where she served until her discharge Aug. 20, 1946 as hospital corpsman, first class. She is survived by her mother, Mrs. Edna Wright of Milan, Ill., four sisters, Mrs. Laverne Miller, Polo, Mrs. Mildred Willard and Mrs. Alta Wolf, Dixon, Mrs. Ruth Williams of Rockford and her grandmother, Mrs. Cora Shoemaker of Eldena. The body will be at the Preston funeral home until the hour of the funeral.

Senator Ball, of Minnesota, seems to have taken the floor for the time being on the subject of the closed shop and his proposal that the same be outlawed.

Like the hilly-white primaries of the south, and Jim-Crow, this is a thing, this closed shop, which came about as a desperate expedient to combat immediate inequalities and dangers, and I doubt that it can be cured, suddenly, by an act of national law or a number of individual state laws except in states which are not strongly unionized.

Ironically, but not strangely, for they are as inconsistent as a bouncing football, whose whimsical behavior Knute Rockne used to dwell upon in lectures to his tallies at Notre Dame, the bleeding hearts of the late new deal upheld the closed shop as angrily as they damn racial discrimination for substantially the same faults.

The south went hilly white and adopted Jim Crow in desperate circumstances. The white patriots, and they were patriots to their own land and included the best people of the south, had been barred from the polls and from the rights of citizenship by hot-eyed fanatics of the north, most of whom had taken an aloof and sedentary part in the long war, but now rushed in as profiteers and fore-runners of our later-day AMG and UNRRA. These furious and greedy oppressors could not forgive the late rebels for having fought so well. So, as a humiliation, in addition to other punishments, they were subordinated to the freedmen, most of whom were absolutely illiterate and could be manipulated by the carpetbaggers.

The liberated slaves could vote but the white war veterans could not and the poverty stricken rebels saw their government taken over by rascals from the north who operated through Negro puppets to tax them for all kinds of extravagances that they simply could not afford, to steal their state railroads and to terrorize their families. That was the condition that brought about the Ku Klux rebellion and that the Negro exclusion from the polls and social segregation.

With the passing of time the inconsistencies of the political exclusion with the principles of the American system has become gradually apparent. However, the idea that a sudden and absolute remedy can be wrought is as dangerous as the idea that the closed shop can be abolished by law in the same abrupt way. The abrupt method would cost many lives but not the lives of the few lecturers, editorial writers and remote opinion-makers in Washington who counsel that method.

In theory, the open shop is ideal. Its correctness has been conceded in hurried and furtive passages.

Deafened People May Now Hear Clearly

Science has now made it possible for the deafened to hear. It is a hearing device so small that it fits in the hand and enables thousands to enjoy sermons, music, and friendly companionship. Accepted by the Council on Physical Medicine of the American Medical Association, this device does not require separate battery pack, battery wire, case or garment to bulge or weigh you down. The tone is clear and powerful. So made that you can adjust it yourself to suit your hearing as your hearing changes. The makers of Beltone, Dept. 52063, 1450 West 19th St., Chicago 3, Ill., are so proud of their achievement that they will gladly send free descriptive booklet and explain how you may get a full demonstration of this remarkable hearing device in your own home without risking a penny. even by Franklin D. Roosevelt and Madam Frances Perkins. But the closed shop is a practice and a condition whose sudden abolition by the enforcement of a national law would raise hell in American industry and, undoubtedly, cost lives.

The closed shop was a method of compelling workers to join unions for their own immediate good—the good of them all. It was a way to prevent employers from bringing in temporarily distressed hands to undercut the going wages and to force the free-riders, or slackers, to pay into the union treasuries a fair price for the benefits in wages which the unions had won or claimed to have won.

In a very short time, however, a union card in a closed shop became a new version of the yellow-dog contract by which employers, long ago, tried to break unions through individual agreements with individuals. It is a yellow-dog contract today. The closed-shop union workman has signed away his right of contract and agreed to live henceforth in the status of an "average" under severe discipline. He is not a man and an individual. He must not work any faster or better than the union allows him to.

Many offenses for which he may be fined heavily and expelled from his union are not offenses at all under our public laws. His right of appeal is only theoretical at best and in some unions, is not even a theory. He may not even find his own job but must take his assignment from the union hall which means that some racketeer, as evil as any employer ever was, may shake down the members for preference in hiring. He must pay political assessments to elect candidates whom he opposes and oppose propositions on the ballot which he approves. The union constitutions are rigged in favor of the union bosses, most of whom, in the upper classes of the movement, live in luxury and never suffer from strikes. The closed shop means that the human being and American citizen may not sell his labor at all if some individual gangster, such as Joe Fay, of Newark and New York, personally "strikes" a job to enforce a shake-down of $100,000 for himself and a few other vicious enemies of labor. He may not sell it at all if a half-dozen political unionists in Washington come out of a smoke-filled room, with a decision to strike an entire industry across the nation. Neither can the non-union worker get the job.

These are only a few of the evils of closed-shop unionism and yet I foresee that any attempt to enforce an open shop abruptly under law would start another season of that anarchy which rattled the structure of the American state in the formative years of the CIO. A "mass-mind" has been created which controls enough men to tie up industries large and small. Moreover, many employers of "masses" now prefer to deal with unions, hiring "labor" by the thousands under contracts. They are adjusted to closed shop unionism and they are not fastidious about the rights and dignity of the individual after their experience with Malingers, loafers, locker-room lawyers and saboteurs. Let the union bosses enforce discipline and they will be content.

The closed shop developed its own inequities as bad as any that ever existed under the open shop but more dangerous because it concentrated so much political, financial and human power in the hands of a few.

The safe way and a feasible way is to trim those powers by laws which can be passed in the present mood of congress, which can be enforced and would be approved by the union members themselves. These would be laws to reform unionism from the outside. Such reforms would include revision of their constitutions and restriction of their powers to raise money and the purposes for which they may spend it.

I believe the rank and file would like these reforms because they would injure only the personal and political interests of the union bosses. They would not damage the unions or the workers in them.

Do this and, in a few years, we might try an open shop law for perfection's sake and find that only a few individualists preferred to remain non-union, after all.

Love Has Two Faces

By Irene Lonnen Ernhart

Copyright, 1947, MEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: Cassie Fletcher is the main support of her family and feels such a burden of responsibility toward them that she turns down Mike Correll's proposal of marriage, even though she is in love with him. When Leni, her spoiled 17-year-old sister, and wealthy Lon Cavendish try to clope, they are headed off by Cassie and Parker Hamilton, a friend of Leni's. The next day Leni vows she'll get even. Parker Hamilton telephones Cassie.

VII
PARKER HAMILTON asked about Leni. "I've a note for her, from Lon. You knew they left today, didn't you?"

"Yes."

Cassie didn't mean to sound unkind. It was just that she felt antagonistic toward all the Hamiltons and Cavendishes of the town.

"Could I bring the note out? I want to explain about last night."

"Yes, I guess so."

"About eight?"

Parker Hamilton was taller than she had remembered. Of course she'd been too excited last night to pay much attention to him. His brown eyes were pleasant and there was a kind look to his firm mouth.

He stood at the screen door, as embarrassed as she. Papa took his pipe out of his mouth and frowned from beneath his brows. Mama stopped her rocking, her fat face stilled, her lips drawn into a thin line of disapproval.

Cassie introduced him.

His face reddened as he stood there in the uncomfortable silence. And finally he said, "I thought maybe you'd like to go for a drive so I could explain."

"All right," Cassie said. "See that Sid does the dishes," she told Mama.

Parker waited until they had driven away from the house, before he gave her the note for Leni. It was in a small envelope of thick vellum.

"The Cavendish family were up last night when I took Lon home," he explained. He grimaced. "They finally pumped the story out of us. They high-pressed Lon into promising he wouldn't see Leni again until Christmas."

"They didn't need to worry about Leni making a fuss. Nor about our letting Leni marry him. Why she's still in high school!" Cassie said bitterly. "And anyway, he isn't the sort we want Leni to marry."

"She's awfully pretty," Parker offered.

"But I—you're even prettier."

He reddened again, as he had back on the Fletcher front porch. "I'm horribly sorry about the whole thing, and I'm especially sorry we had to meet under such unpleasant circumstances."

"It's all right," Cassie said. "Everything's okay. Now if you'll just drive me home—or I can get out here. I wanted to stop at the drugstore anyway."

"You don't dislike me, do you, on account of what happened?" He glanced at her as he swung the car around a corner and across the creek bridge.

Here was where Mike had asked her to marry him—only yesterday. Was it only yesterday? Her heart plunged, remembering. Mike was probably gone by now, on that six o'clock train. Mike, Oh Mike!

"No, I don't particularly dislike you. Why should I?" She turned her brown eyes toward his.

"Then why do you act so hostile?" He pulled the car to a stop at the tiny corner drugstore.

"I'm worried. I have troubles. If you were in my shoes you wouldn't be able to either. And anyway, what business is it of yours?"

"Well," he spread his hands out helplessly. "I guess it isn't. Only I hate to see you so upset. I really think Leni will get over thinking about Lon, eventually, if that's what you're worried about."

"It doesn't interest me, what you think," Cassie said. She opened the car door and got out, and started across the walk. "Thanks for bringing the note," she said.

She didn't go into the store after all, but started toward home.

SLOWING her steps as she took the shortcut across the commons and across the footbridge over the creek, she began to dredge up out of her memory all the things she'd ever heard or read about Parker Hamilton.

His father was president of the bank, she knew that, and the Hamiltons owned the old Machine Works. They had plenty of money and Parker was the only child.

His mother was dead. Parker, she recalled, had been married once and divorced. He'd been in service, too, right after Pearl Harbor, in the Navy, and wounded, and then mustered out because of the injury.

She shrugged. Her hand felt again the crisp envelope of Lon's note in her pocket. Oh, well, what if she had been honest, she'd never see Parker Hamilton again, so what did it matter?

Leni was up when Cassie got home. She sat at the kitchen table, eating a bowl of the chili Mama had saved for her. Her eyes were red-rimmed, her face blotchy and swollen. She looked somehow older than 17.

Her hair, an uncombed tangle, was tied with a pink ribbon and she was wearing the new pink housecoat Cassie had gotten for Christmas and never worn.

Mama hovered at the sink, drying the dishes for Sid.

"I let Leni put on your new housecoat, because I thought it would make her feel better, Cassie."

Leni, the sweetness deepening on her face, didn't look up.

Cassie handed her the envelope and in an instant she slid from the chair and flew to the bedroom, tearing the note open as she went.

Woman's Club Speaker Talks on South America

"The misunderstanding in the world today is due to the lack of understanding people of other nations and races," Mrs. Alfred L. Jacobs told Dixon Woman's club members at their meeting at the Loveland Community house Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Jacobs, the wife of an exporter, who has travelled all over the world talked on South America. In general, she stated:

Ideas Differ
The people of the United States are prone to think that if people do not dress, eat, look and speak as we do they are queer. We forget that others think the same of us. We speak as Americans and South Americans do too.

It is not easy to travel in South America because the background of the people is so very different. They settled for gold and adventure and this type of glamour is still maintained. The culture of South America is that of southern Europe and a South American will send his children to finishing schools in southern Europe.

Our minds today are not traveling as fast as our bodies. Leaving an airport in San Francisco at 9:00 o'clock one morning, we can reach any port in the world by 9:00 o'clock the next morning. Our understanding of others has not advanced fast enough. We do not want to give up what we have and other nations do not want to give up what they have. It must be one word or it will be no word at all.

People of South America have an inborn love of beauty that is hard for us to understand. Even the maid who waits on you is bedecked with a garland of flowers.

Size Forgotten
Too often people of the United States forget the vastness of South American countries. Colombia is three times the size of Texas. Chile placed diagonally across our country would reach from Seattle to Miami. Argentina would cover three fourths of the United States and Brazil is as large as the United States, Alaska, Puerto Rico, and the Philippines combined. Flying straight south of Miami to South America the plane would land on the western coast of Colombia.

South Americans are so easy-going. Tomorrow is probably better than today after all. Every one enjoys a siesta from noon until 3:00 o'clock. We hurry with breakfast to hurry to an appointment to hurry to lunch and so on.

Colombia
Barranquilla, Colombia, is very modern in parts. It is like Hollywood. Stores are in the back of houses so as not to mar the residences. The suburb is very modern. The people have mostly Negro blood, and the women wear bright striped skirts. Every hat must have a feather, the darker the skin the more vivid the color.

People of Bogota drink black coffee continually and appointments with business men are kept in coffee houses. There the marble topped table is used for figuring while drinking coffee. When the men are gone the waiter wipes off the table and it is ready for the next business man. Bogota is the Athens of South America. The people are pure Spanish. The city is very cultured. Its largest export was baby grand pianos. For entertainment they enjoy discussions problems of people.

Indian Population
Ecuador is one of the poorest South American countries. Here the people are Indians. They have had a hard life along the coast. The Quito Indian is very tall and straight and he carries his wares to sell upon his back. The open-toed sandal worn by them for centuries is like our modern shoe and the cocoa bean is their livelihood. During the drying season for this bean the streets are closed to traffic and the beans are dried in the street.

Some Incas still live in Peru. In Lima we see the great civilization of the Incas. Buildings are of large heavy stones brought over mountains before wheels or wagons were used and those still standing are without mortar or cement and yet they are waterproof. The weaving loom is carried with the Incas wherever they go. In Peru even the very poor use silver dishes. Great silver mines are here.

Chile
To fly along the coast of Chile would be a long flight. The sun-raise with its many colors can be likened to a huge symphony orchestra. An atheist should be compelled to see this handiwork of God. The largest copper mines of the world are here. Many of our needed metals come from Chile. Inflation is terrible right now. A simple cotton dress valued at $10 to $15 here would cost $75 there. A cup of coffee costs 50 cents. They cannot understand how we could manufacture so fast during the war but cannot do so now.

Santiago is in the midst of the Andes. In these mountains there are twenty-one peaks higher than Mt. Whitney. The Christ of Andes is striking in that Christ faces Argentina and has his back on Chile. The Chileans say: "Perhaps Argentina needed a little more watching."

City Life
Buenos Aires, Argentina, has more skyscrapers, good roads, parkways, schools, books, newspapers or everything that makes for progress than any other city. Strange that progressive nations seem to want more and more and are the cause of wars. Revolutions here seem numerous but they are more demonstrative than dangerous.

The lavishness of life in the large cities can best be described by the meals that are served in one day. Servants are many and reasonable. Breakfast means large pots of coffee, tea or chocolate, many fruits, a large tray of various kinds of rolls, with at least twenty pats of butter and all kinds of jam. This is all for one person.

Typical Day
Men go to business at 9:00 o'clock. In the middle of the morning they go to the cafes. Here they may choose from many cocktails, a large platter of fancy sandwiches, bowls of salted nuts and potato chips. It is not long until lunch time. In the tea room a long double decker cart is rolled in. On it is all sorts of pickled fowl and fruit. A servant fills your plate for this course, which is true of every course be it fruit, fish, soup or fowl course. Then comes the main course. One serving is a pound to a pound and a half of meat with potatoes and vegetables. There is also a salad course and a dessert course.

After this heavy noon meal the shopping is done. All streets are cleared of vehicles. Poorer people window shop. They tell the children about the beauty of the articles from other parts of the world. At 5:30 o'clock tea is ready. This again means large pots of beverages, many rolled sandwiches plus a large plate of muffins and jams and butter and about thirty petitfours.

Many people attend some opera in the evening. Operas may be enjoyed at least three hundred days a year. It only costs ten cents for any gallery seat. These are not cheap houses and the lounges are beautifully furnished.

Only Paris ranks higher. When the opera is over another dinner like the noon day meal is served. So much meat has been eaten that the people are not fat but strong.

Uruguay is a child's paradise. There is always a toy shop next to a butcher's shop or a baker's shop. Education begins with pre-kindergarten. The government pays for all education through the professional training of the pupil.

The Brazilian Portuguese is always very polite. There is no color line in Brazil. Class distinction, if any, is based on education. It seems Brazil has all the old open street cars that the United States has discarded. Street cars have first, second and third class riding. The first class rider must always wear a coat and shoes. He pays two cents, second class one cent, and third class, two for one cent. Many riders go only a few blocks and hang on to the running board thus riding third class.

The night clubs in Rio de Janeiro are very different from ours. There are three stages. One hundred twenty-five performers for each stage. Each stage is complete with its own orchestra and scenery. South American is very dependent upon her exports and needs our trade and help.

As Mrs. Jacobs spoke of various types of people she would show dolls dressed to represent that type. Her collection is true to life. The faces of the dolls have real character.

The Press and Publicity department of which Miss Esther Barton is chairman, sponsored the speaker. Mrs. Robert H. Harridge presided at the business session during which a collection taken was for the March of Dimes.

Mrs. H. F. Walder, chairman of the Public Welfare department, reported that Charles W. Reed, assistant superintendent of the St. Charles Training School would be the speaker at the next meeting. Don Kolloway, Chicago White Sox second sacker, claims Bill Eckhardt, rookie southpaw from Rochelle, will be a "future star with the club."

Eckhardt, who recently signed a 1947 pact with the Pale Hose, is 27 years old and six feet one inch tall. He weighs 180.

Tagged "Bede" by intimates, Eckhardt began his professional career in the Kitty league in 1911. He served four years in the army, playing semi-pro ball while stationed in Chicago, and pitching for various camp teams.

After being discharged he accompanied the Sox on their 1916 spring training jaunt, hurling several exhibition games before being shipped to Shreveport, La., of the Texas league.

With the Sports, he won only four and lost seven but impressed observers by hurling "heavy" baseball.

A native of Rochelle, Eckhardt starred as a high school football and basketball player. He's a family man, the father of four children.

BANQUET NEWS—Traveling squad members of the Dixon football team, Coach Wally Coon, Athletic director A. C. Bowers and newspapermen gathered at the Manhattan tomorrow evening at 8 p. m. for a steak dinner.

The dinner is being held by Paul Potts and Lyle Myers as a reward for Friday's 28-21 victory over Mendota. Coach Lee Davidson's varsity failed to qualify under terms of the offer when the Trojans pulled out a 44-41 victory.

NEW PAPA—Bill Shultz, who recently returned to Dixon from the U. of Wisconsin and is now playing basketball with the Coss Dairy City league outfit, is the proud papa of a 10 pound, four and one-half ounce baby girl born Saturday evening at KSB hospital.

A star cager at Dixon high school, Shultz graduated in 1941 and joined the navy after war was declared. He put in almost two years overseas duty in the South Pacific, receiving a discharge in February, 1945, with the rank of lieutenant (jg).

Bill plans to enter dental school this fall. Incidentally, his father, "Friday", who writes the "Bowling Bits" column for The Telegraph sports page, claims he's gonna have to grow a "long white beard" since the grandfatherly sobriquet became effective.

SPRING ON THE WAY—Sunday's relatively mild weather brought baseball back as a dinner table talking point. Early next month the major league spring training grind will commence and it won't be long until another season will be upon us.

It was also reported several youngsters in the west end, disdaining Florida or California warm-ups, dug gloves and balls out of the closet yesterday for practice sessions.

NOTE TO NELSON POTTER—Muddy Ruel, your new boss, is quoted by Allan Merritt, AP reporter, as saying "callisthenics are a waste of time for a ball player." Muddy declares the time usually reserved for exercises will be utilized for infield practice and other workouts when the Browns go into spring training Feb. 24 at Miami.

Hungry Children Assured at Least One Meal a Day

Lake Success, N. Y., Jan. 27—(AP)—The millions of hungry children in war-devastated Europe and China are going to get at least one square meal a day.

Under a 54-member United Nations agreement, a voluntarily-financed international children's emergency fund is being put into circulation to make sure that the new generation can "build on a sound foundation the world of tomorrow."

U. N. Secretary-General Trygve Lie, in a report published last week on the establishment and management of the fund declared "that all the urgent problems of reconstruction arising at the present time, none is more urgent than that of bringing about the rehabilitation of the younger generation."

Problem Is Urgent One

Under U. N. plans, the fund will be put to work feeding children in countries which have lost as victims of aggression as many as one person in every four of their prewar population, where children were not only deprived of food "but lived in a state of constant terror, witnesses of the massacre of civilians and of the horrors of scientific warfare, and exposed to progressive lowering of standards of social conduct."

The U. N. general assembly, in creating the fund, declared that "the urgent problem facing the United Nations is how to ensure the survival of these children."

$20 Annually Per Child

Recognizing that the greatest burden of relief work will fall on national governments, the United Nations set as a desirable objective the provision of one square meal daily. This objective would cost in all about $20 per year for each child.

The fund's monies will come from any voluntary contributions made by governments, voluntary agencies, individuals and whatever is given by the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration.

The UNRRA council already has given the fund $550,000.

Although no public campaign has yet been started, a group of students of the public school of Carson, Wash., started off contributions with a check for $219.

G & O Modernizes For Coming Merger

Mobile, Ala., Jan. 27—(AP)—The Gulf, Mobile & Ohio railroad is getting ready for its anticipated merger with the Alton line, which will give its outlets to Chicago and Kansas City, with a multi-million dollar modernization and expansion program.

G. M. & O. President I. B. Tigrett said Saturday that the line had contracted for $25,683,000 of new equipment during 1946 in expectation the formal acquisition of the Alton road would be completed this spring.

The executive said anticipated revenues of the combined lines in 1947 would be approximately $65,000,000.

Kenney Talk Spurs Search for World Permanent Peace

Envisions Trans-Polar Assault Which Could Knock Out U. S.

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst
General George C. Kenney, chief of the strategic air command at Andrews Field, Md., tells us that in a future war our United States would be the first target and would be reached by a trans-Polar assault list of 25,000,000 men, women and children in the first 24 hours.

The general thus bluntly advised the Women's Patriotic Conference on Defense yesterday in Washington. He asserted that, above all, the enemy would strive for a quick knockout, the attack coming over the shortest air routes from the European-Asiatic land mass, across the North Polar basin.

Dreamboat Proves It Possible

Apocryphal of this, it's less than four months ago that the Pacusan Dreamboat—the giant B-29 of the U. S. Army air forces flew non-stop from Honolulu over the Arctic to Cairo. General Carl Spaatz, AAF commander, stated at the time that this proved "the feasibility of flight across the Polar wastes."

Kenney said the attack would be made "by both piloted and pilotless aircraft, by radio-controlled missiles, by rockets—all loaded with atomic bombs, super-explosives, super-incendiaries, bacterial weapons or whatever means of mass destruction happens to be in vogue at the time." Just to make sure that he got his idea home, the general added that "four atomic bombs of the old Hiroshima-Nagasaki type, properly placed, would knock New York City out of commission."

Tries to Stir Action
That's strong mustard, and obviously is so intended by General Kenney. He has deliberately emphasized one of the gravest dangers of the day—the development of another global conflict which would bring into play not only the atomic bomb but many other fearsome agents of death which have been created since the close of World War II. His purpose naturally is to spur the minds of men to devise ways of averting such catastrophe.

There are two ways of meeting this menace. One is to prepare mighty defenses to try to ward off attack. The other is to push through measures for control of the atomic bomb and for universal disarmament. Pending disarmament, preparedness must be the watch-word.

Ponder Disarmament
That is why these are among the paramount international problems of this new year. All roads of thought among peace-minded folk, in whatever country they may live, lead toward a solution of disarmament. And of course the atomic bomb and the control of atomic energy are foremost, for he who holds this greatest secret of the ages must inevitably be an object of suspicion and fear.

Kent Cooper, executive director of the Associated Press, in a recent radio interview with station WJR of Detroit, put the atomic problem like this:
"No real advances can be made, no real security can be achieved unless the atomic issue is settled on an international basis."

Settle Atom Question
Certainly we can expect no general disarmament while the atomic question is hanging fire. And by the same token the rehabilitation of Europe cannot be achieved, because of the economic and political problems are interlocked with those of security.

That's one thing which makes the framing of the all-important German peace treaty so difficult. Indeed, it will be surprising if it's possible to secure a satisfactory adjustment of the German and Austrian issues until a far better understanding has been reached in the matter of the atomic bomb and

Out of the Notebook

(By HAL BOYLE)

New York—(AP)—There is one thing worse than a childless couple. That's a childless couple without a dog. That's us.

But we used to have a dog. His name was Pencil, quickly shortened to "Pencil."

He was pretty much like any other cinnamom colored cocker with a wet nose and a friendly tail, except for a brief moment of madness his grandmother had with a gish strain named Pencil subject to occasional moods of Teutonic melancholy and left him slightly longer east and west than is customary in a thoroughbred spaniel.

But generally he was the happiest, ear-flopping dog I ever saw off the farm. If he ever had a flea he kept it to himself, and never scratched when visitors were present to give the house a bad name. Frances, my wife, got Pencil as a pup while I was overseas hating Hitler. Pencil liked the apartment but he also liked going to call on the veterinarian, until that prosperous animal lover once gave him an enema and soaked him a $5 hotel bill for staying all night. After that Pencil let the worms—if any—gnaw him in silence. I never knew a dog to get over ill health quicker.

When I returned the pup was beginning to learn there was a vague but important difference to grownups between a table leg and a fire hydrant. But he still was in the chewy stage.

"He scatters clothes around worse than you do," said my wife, the morning after my return.

Pencil immediately whipped around the bed like a fur-covered football, snapped up one of my socks and streaked back into the living room. On the principle that a husband can do anything a dog can, I bent down, came up with the other sock in my mouth, and began chasing him around the sofa in my pajamas.

Neither performance impressed Frances. She looked at us with the socks dangling from our jaws and said:

the general proposition of disarmament. These strategically situated countries loom large in the security calculations of both eastern and western Europe.

How can the United Nations create peace for the enemy countries until they have achieved peace among themselves?

"One of you has got to go." I won by promising to take her with me as far as California on my way to Japan, and we farmed out poor Pencil to some acquaintances out of town.

When she came back to Manhattan, Frances felt lonesome and called up Pencil's foster parents. "Oh, mamma, she's coming to take Pencil back," she overheard the stricken child who answered the phone say to her mother.

When Frances arrived the home was as neat and furiously scrubbed as if she were a social worker checking on a family that had adopted a baby.

"We want you to see that Pencil has a nice home here," said the little girl.

But what broke Frances' heart was Pencil himself. That chameleon-colored scoundrel greeted her effusively but immediately let her know he thought he was better off where he was. He jumped on a soft chair seat and rolled luxuriantly in it with a grinning face that seemed to say "You wouldn't let me do this, but looky, nobody minds it here."

As she started to leave, he did come up and put his cold nose in her hand in a gesture of memory and love for the one who had raised him. But the next second he began running wildly around among the trees and bushes to tell her: "See how much more space I've got!"

Frances cried a little on the way home.

Later Pencil wandered away from his new home. He was stolen. There is no way ever to find out what happened to him.

Somehow now when I come home late to dinner, Frances looks up without spoken complaint. It is probably only my conscience that reads in her speculative glance of reproach:

"And to think I gave up Pencil for you—just when he was learning to behave."

Horse Show Group Meet at Elks Club

The annual meeting of the Northern Illinois Horse Show association was held Sunday afternoon at the club house of Dixon lodge of Elks with about 75 horsemen from the northern section of Illinois in attendance. W. L. Runzel of Norwood Park, president of the Chicago Manufacturers' association and owner of the famous Blue Top Stables, was elected president of the organization for the ensuing year.

Carl Hasselberg of Dixon, who has served two terms as president of the organization, was again honored an elected vice president, while Miss Grace Merrill of North Aurora, who has served previous terms, was re-elected to preside as secretary and treasurer. The meeting at Dixon Sunday, drew one of the largest attendances of horsemen in years and all expressed themselves as being hopeful for the most successful season next summer in the history of the organization. Dates were set for horse shows throughout the northern section of the state, July 12 and 13 being assigned for the Dixon show, which to date is without a sponsor. Following the meeting several of the visitors were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hasselberg.

Education: Fools Walk In Garb of Wise Men

Evansville, Ill., Jan. 27—(AP)—President Lyndon G. Brown, of Knox college, Galesburg, Ill., appraises "academic trappings" as the avenues through which it sometimes is possible for fools to masquerade as wise men.

Speaking at the annual founders' day ceremony of Northwestern university yesterday, Dr. Brown said that "true learning is too difficult for the average person to recognize" that the consequent "persecution of learning may be as much of a deterrent to human progress" as the witch-hunts of old.

He explained that "the teacher is too often treated with a special politeness on public occasion, but excluded from the intimate privacy of the home, the club or the serious discussions of 'those who belong'."

Two Hurt Slightly In Collision Here

Two Rockford residents suffered minor injury in an automobile accident at North Peoria avenue and Everett street Sunday morning about 7:30 in which a truck was considerably damaged, Charles Kennedy, 39, 2102 West State street, Rockford, and his companion, Mildred Coffey, 30, of the Hapes hotel, Rockford, were occupants of the panel truck which crashed into a tree at the intersection. Both were removed to the KSB hospital by Russ McCannahan, where their injuries were treated after which they returned to Rockford.

Patrolmen Ray Wilson and Jack Van Meter, who investigated the accident, reported that Kennedy stated that as he approached the intersection, another car east bound passed his truck which was loaded with bakery equipment. In avoiding the collision, Kennedy crashed into a tree, badly damaging his truck. Both occupants of the truck suffered minor injuries and the vehicle was hauled to a local garage.

Plan Non-Stop Fighter Flight Across Pacific

Honolulu, Jan. 27—(AP)—A non-stop fighter plane flight from Honolulu to New York in quest of a dual speed and endurance record for that type of aircraft will be made "soon" with a new North American P-51, the Army air forces announces.

The P-51 is essentially two of the familiar P-51 Mustangs put together, so that it has two fuselages and two engines.

The flight from Hickam field will be at 20,000 feet, crossing the California coast at Point Arena, northwest of San Francisco, and passing over Reno, Nev., Rock Springs, Wyo., Detroit and Erie, Pa., to La Guardia field, New York. Estimated flying time is about 15 hours.
